

Brad Gordon is executive vice president, general counsel and secretary for Gilbane Building Company, one of the nation's largest construction management firms. Brad also serves as the company's Chief Ethics and Compliance Officer. Gilbane is based in Providence, Rhode Island and has over 45 U.S. and international offices across the globe. Brad oversees all legal affairs for Gilbane including corporate policy-making, compliance, claims resolution, litigation management, labor relations, contracts and corporate governance.

Prior to Gilbane, he served as corporate counsel for Camp Dresser & McKee Inc. (CDM), a global consulting, engineering, construction, and operations firm based in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Brad began his career in private practice in Washington, D.C., where he focused on complex corporate litigation and continued in private practice in Massachusetts, representing municipalities and public school districts with a focus on legal issues related to public building and public works construction projects. From this experience, he has gained a unique understanding of issues concerning the construction industry from the perspectives of owners, architects/engineers and construction managers.

Brad is a Fellow in the American College of Construction Lawyers and frequently conducts professional seminars and sits on industry panels on topics ranging from risk management to corporate ethics. He holds a J.D. from The George Washington University Law School and a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He is licensed to practice law in Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Virginia, and the District of Columbia and is an adjunct professor of law at Roger Williams University Law School. Brad lives in Marion, Massachusetts, where he serves as the elected Town Moderator.
