

Smrithi Ramesh is the Director of the Asia Case Management Centre (CMC) of the American Arbitration Association- International Centre for Dispute Resolution (AAA-ICDR). The Asia CMC was set up to further the institution's expansion plans in Asia and to build capacity in the region. She has a diverse background with expertise in case management, proficiency in institutional rules, alternative dispute resolution services and institutions in the region. Prior to joining the AAA-ICDR, she was the Deputy Director of an arbitral institution set up under the auspices of the Asian African Legal Consultative Organization. She was responsible for handling the case management team and has experience in case administration and over view of arbitration, adjudication, mediation and domain name disputes. She is passionate about capacity building and has presented in many conferences, seminars, training initiatives and has spear headed many developmental and policy projects in ADR. She was involved in the revision of the Arbitration Act (Malaysia), Investor State Mediation Rules and other Alternative Dispute Resolution projects (ADR) within Malaysia and for Asia. She has worked with various stakeholders in Asia and Africa towards implementation of ADR policy and development of an ADR ecosystem. She is also the lead contributor for the book "Law, Practice and Procedure of Arbitration (Lexis Nexis 2nd edn) , an expert contributor for the book "Arbitration in Malaysia (Reuters) and Editor of the Construction Adjudication Reports of Malaysia (Reuters). Smrithi has also practiced in India dealing with a variety of transactional, domestic and international arbitration disputes. She is originally a qualified lawyer from India and holds an LLM from University of California, Berkeley.