

SCOTT BASS is the founder of the Sidley Austin LLP Global Life Sciences and Food and Drug Law practices in the United States, China and Europe. He provides seasoned strategic guidance on critical innovation, compliance and enforcement issues, including in the Good Manufacturing Practice [GMP], pharmacovigilance, promotion and litigation arenas. Scott has led the defense of many high-stakes criminal and civil investigations and audits.

As a lead drafter of the Dietary Supplement Health and Education Act, Scott has authored three books and is co-author of a recent New England Journal of Medicine article on necessary changes to that law. He serves as General Counsel to the global OTC drug association and as dietary supplement counsel to the association's U.S. counterpart.

Scott co-headed GMP and adverse event reporting meetings in China, advised U.S. FDA on its first dietary supplement website, and served on a European Commission expert panel on food safety.

He is an honors graduate of the University of Michigan Law School, held FDA-related leadership positions at the American Bar Association and NYS Bar Associations, and served as an Adjunct Professor at Georgetown University Graduate School.

As of January 1, 2026, Scott will be leading Scott Bass Life Sciences LLC, a consulting firm located in Rockefeller Center, NYC, specializing in Life Sciences Dispute Review Board and high-level strategy matters. basslifesciences.com.
