

R. Craig Williams FAIA, RIBA, Esq.

R. Craig Williams, FAIA, RIBA, Esq., an attorney and registered architect, is the Chief Legal Officer and a Principal with HKS Architects, Inc., an 83 year old international architecture firm with 1,600 employees in 24 offices in the US, United Kingdom, UAE, Mexico, China, Japan, and Singapore. His responsibilities include contract management, drafting, and negotiation, insurance and risk management, employment law matters, and firm management as well corporate compliance with laws in all states and many foreign jurisdictions. Craig has held leadership positions in design, construction, and legal organizations in Texas and nationwide, including The Texas Society of Architects, Dallas/AIA, Dallas Bar Association, The University of Texas School of Architecture Foundation, and as chairman of the AIA Risk Management Committee; and, he is a frequent author and speaker on topics that intersect design, construction, and law. He was co-founder and 2013-2014 president of The Jefferson Society, Inc., a national non-profit organization of attorneys who are also architects. Craig also frequently serves as a Construction Arbitrator with the American Arbitration Association. Before joining HKS, Craig was a partner in Fisk & Fielder, P.C., a Dallas law firm with focus in representation of design professionals. Prior to law school, Craig practiced architecture as a designer, project architect, and construction contract administrator for residential and retail projects. Craig earned his architecture degree from the University of Texas at Austin, and his law degree from Southern Methodist University.